It is likely our region will be pummeled with an excess of snow and/or ice, starting very late tonight and continuing through tomorrow morning. While we never cancel Wine Trail events, we are aware that some attendees might be uncomfortable driving in those conditions and opt to not attend the event this weekend. The industrious county employees here in our region responsible for snow removal and road salting will likely be very hard at work, and our main roads will probably be cleared enough to be driven upon, so provided you can safely make the drive here to our Trail, you should be ok. That said, if you choose to not attend this weekend, rest assured your tickets and event glasses will be saved for you at your starting winery, and you will be more than welcome to come out any weekend between now and February 26, pick those things up, and go out and visit all the participating wineries, enjoy the wines, and have fun. We will be monitoring conditions closely, and in the unlikely event there are temporary, government-mandates road closures, we will do our best to notify you of that via email.

Atwater Estate Vineyards will be closed Saturday, and hopefully be open Sunday. For those people scheduled to start the event at Atwater either Saturday or Sunday, or a future weekend as described above, please start instead at J.R. Dill Winery less than half a mile south of Atwater. J.R. Dill will have your tickets and complimentary wine glasses and will definitely be open. All other participating wineries are scheduled to be open for the event as scheduled. For the best information on potential road closures, please visit this site: <https://511ny.org/>.

We apologize for any inconvenience, and we appreciate your understanding. If you have any additional questions, please call our office during regular business hours at 607-535-8080.

Sincerely,
Paul Thomas
